1. Foreword

This publication presents the results corresponding to the Tourist Campsite Occupancy Survey.

The most important information from the survey is offered monthly, in accordance with the Institute's dissemination regulations.

The two aspects considered in the tourism study are reflected in the data provided: as regards demand, information is included on travellers, overnight stays and average stay distributed by traveller's country of residence and category of the accommodation they occupy or the Autonomous Community they are from in the case of Spanish travellers, alongside information on the total number of occupied pitches distributed per accommodation category. As regards supply, information includes the estimated number of establishments open for the season, estimated number of vacancies, estimated number of pitches, level of occupancy and information on employment in the sector, according to the category of the establishment.

This information is presented monthly on a national basis and in the Autonomous Communities and provinces with the highest number of overnight stays, as well as in the holiday areas that receive the greatest inflow of visitors over the year.

The National Statistics Institute thanks all professionals, businesspersons and institutions related to the tourist sector for their collaboration, which has been essential when carrying out this survey.

2. Objectives

The main objective of the Campsite Occupancy Survey is to ascertain the behaviour of a series of variables which allow us to describe the segment occupied by this type of accommodation within the tourist sector, both from a supply as well as a demand point of view.

3. Statistical unit

The analysis units are all campsite establishments registered as such in the corresponding Tourist Office Register of each Autonomous Community.

Tourist campsites are understood to be those land spaces which are duly delimited, equipped and conditioned, used to habitually provide people, after the payment of a stipulated price, with a place to live outdoors for a limited period of time for holiday or tourism purposes, and using as a residence mobile homes, caravans, tents or other similar easily transportable elements.

Tourist campsites are classified, in accordance with their installations and the services offered, into the following four categories: luxury, first-class, second-class and third-class.

4. Survey scope

All establishments in the country are researched.

5. Definition of Variables

5.1 Estimated open establishments

The number of establishments open for the season as estimated by the survey.

An establishment open for the season is an establishment in which the reference month is included within its opening period.

5.2 Estimated vacancies

Number of vacancies estimated by the survey of establishments open for the season.

For campsites, the number of vacancies corresponds with the authorised capacity of persons.

5.3 Estimated pitches

The total number of estimated pitches in a campsite is defined as the sum of:

- estimated pitches
- estimated bungalows
- estimate caravans owned by the campsite
- estimated area not divided into pitches used for camping

in establishments open during the season.

A pitch is defined as the surface area, numbered and perfectly delimited, used for camping.

A bungalow is defined as a fixed construction within the campsite used as an accommodation unit.

A caravan owned by the campsite is defined as a mobile accommodation unit the use of which is rented out for a stipulated price.

The area not divided into pitches is a section of the campsite where free camping is allowed.

5.4 Travellers checked in

All persons who stay for one or more consecutive nights in the same accommodation.

Travellers are classified by their country of residence and people residing in Spain are classified by the Autonomous Community they usually live in.

5.5 Overnight stays or occupied vacancies

An overnight stay is understood to be every night that a travellers stays in the establishment. As occurs with the checking in of travellers, occupied vacancies are broken down according to place of residence.

5.6 Average Stay

This variable is an approximation of the number of days which, on average, the travellers stay at the campsite, and is calculated as the quotient between the overnight stays and the number of travellers.

5.7 total number of occupied lots

Understood as the sum of: occupied lots plus occupied bungalows plus occupied caravans owned by the campsite plus the occupied area not divided into pitches.

5.8 Level of occupancy by lots

The level of occupancy by pitches is understood as the percentage-based relationship between the total number of pitches occupied during the month and those available on the campsite during the same period multiplied by the days in the reference month.

5.9 Level of occupancy of pitches on weekends

The percentage-based relationship between the number of pitches occupied on Friday and Saturday in the reference week and the total number of pitches, multiplied by the number of days analysed, in this case two.

5.10 Occupied personnel

Defined as the group of people, remunerated and not remunerated, who contribute with their work to the production of goods and services during the reference period of the survey, even when they work outside the premises.

5.11 Holiday area

6. Framework of the survey and sample design

As the framework for the selection of the informant units, the survey uses the directories from the Tourist Offices of the Autonomous Communities and other sources, which include, amongst other data, the following information: name, address, normal opening period, category of the establishment, number of vacancies, number of pitches, bungalows.

The sample is stratified to the level of province - category.

The survey is exhaustive in all the provinces, except in Ceuta and Melilla, where the survey is not performed because of the non existence of this type of establishment.

Methodological note

As from January 2003, the information published regarding variables for travellers, overnight stays and occupied pitches comes from a new estimate that considers the total occupancy in each establishment during the month analysed. Previously, estimates were performed using data supplied by each establishment for a specific week of the month, so that there was information on every week. In these, and in the other variables, the number of days each establishment has been open during the month in question is also considered.

The variation rate for each variable has been calculated using the same estimation methodology for the two years compared.

8. Information collection

The query pertaining to basic data refers to one week of the month, randomly selected, in such a way that among all the establishments the whole month is covered.

As of January 2003, a second query is performed regarding monthly totals; total number of travellers, overnight stays and pitches occupied during the whole month, alongside the number of days the establishment has been open during the reference month.

The information published for each variable travellers, overnight stays and occupied pitches is estimated on the basis of the data provided in the monthly module.

The questionnaires are received from the campsites by the INE Provincial Delegations, where they are filtered and the data is recorded.

Subsequently, they are forwarded to the central offices of the INE where a second filter is performed, the tables are compiled and the comments drafted. These are published monthly, in accordance with the INE's Availability Calendar of Short-term Statistics.

8. Dissemination of the information

The information is presented at different at different geographical breakdown levels: national, Autonomous Community, provincial, tourist area and tourist site. The areas (groups of municipalities) have been considered, as well as the municipalities in which tourist affluence is specifically located..
