Developments in Denmark's total external trade

Imports has also reverted to the pre-crisis level

There was a sharp fall in Denmark's total exports and imports in 2009 due to the global financial crisis and the subsequent economic slowdown. In 2011 Danish exports had reverted to the same level as that of 2008, for imports that was the case in 2012.

During the last 21 years, Denmark's total exports of goods and services have been higher than total imports and thereby resulting in surplus on the balance of goods and services over the entire period. The development in imports and exports after 2008 resulted in a record high trade balance in 2010 as well as in 2011 – in 2012 the surplus on the balance of goods and services was DKK 82.2 billion.

For definitional reasons, the statistics on external trade in goods and external trade in services cannot be directly aggregated, and consequently the concept of goods from the balance of payments statistics is used in the above figure. In table 338 the transition from the concept of goods used in the external trade statistics to the concept of goods used in the balance of payments statistics can be seen. Adjustments are made e.g. with respect to bunkering and provisioning abroad, repairs and freight.

Sharp increase in trade in services

During most of the 1990s, the pace of the development in trade in goods and services was the same, but from the late 1990s the importance of trade in services to Denmark's external trade has increased and in 2012 trade in services was about 5 times higher than in 1992, while trade in goods was 2.5 times as high.

In 2009 trade in both goods and services was falling due to the global financial crisis, but already in 2010 trade was increasing again - in 2012 only imports of goods have not reverted to the level before the crisis.

External trade in goods

Increase in external trade in goods during the last 21 years

In 2012, external trade in goods was 2.5 times higher than in 1992. Exports increased from DKK 251.0 billion in 1992 to DKK 612.5 billion in 2012. Imports increased from DKK 214.2 billion to DKK 533.3 billion in the same period.

External trade surplus for 25 years in a row

After the Second World War, Denmark's foreign trade can be characterised by two distinct periods. In the early period, Denmark constantly had deficits on the trade balance.

The recent period has been an era of constant surplus, starting with the year 1987. The trade balance is the difference between exports and imports of goods.

Between 1952 and 1986, the annual deficit on the trade balance averaged 4.4 per cent of gross domestic product (GDP). The average surplus in the recent period (including 2012) is 3.2 per cent of GDP.

From the early 1950s, imports and exports each accounted for roughly one-fourth of GDP. In recent years this share, particularly for exports, has risen to nearly one-third.

■ www.statbank.dk/nat01, sitc5r3y and sitc5r4y

Among the factors affecting developments in the post-war period was the increase in raw material prices resulting from e.g. the Korean War in the early 1950s. This implied that imports' and exports' percentage of GDP rose sharply. The two oil crises in the 1970s also resulted in soaring import prices.

Exports as a percentage of GDP rose steeply from the late 1970s until the mid-1980s. Since 1987 exports have had a larger share of GDP than imports – a development that has made a positive contribution to GDP growth.

During the international financial crisis in 2008 and 2009, both imports and exports dropped sharply, so the trade balance surplus was preserved.

Denmark's neighbours are our largest trading partners

Denmark's largest trading partners are geographically close to Denmark. In 2012, the other 26 EU countries accounted for 66 per cent of the total Danish external trade and Norway another 6 per cent.

Countries of export and import

Denmark's external trade is concentrated on a few dominant trading partners. The 10 largest export markets accounted for 67 per cent of total Danish exports in 2012, while 10 countries supplied 72 per cent of total imports into Denmark.

Germany is Denmark's largest trading partner, but in recent years exports to Germany have been declining relatively. In 2012, Germany accounted for 21 per cent of Denmark's imports and 15 per cent of Denmark's exports. 10 years earlier the corresponding figures were 22 per cent and 19 per cent.

Figure 6

Top 10 export and import countries

■ www.statbank.dk/sitc2r3y and sitc2r4y

In recent years, China has been the fastest climber on the list of major trading partners. In 2012, China was the fourth largest supplier of goods to Denmark, accounting for 7 per cent of all Danish imports.

Trade is not quite so brisk in the opposite direction. Roughly 3 per cent of Danish exports go to China, a fact which puts China in the 8th place among Denmark's export markets.

Exports are dominated by agricultural, oil-based and industrial products

Denmark's exports of goods consist mainly of a wide range of industrial products, oil and agricultural products. The most important products with regard to exports of industrial products are pharmaceuticals and machinery, but also clothes, furniture and food products are of high importance. Imports of goods are dominated by oil, goods for consumption and goods for use in the manufacturing industry and other industries.

www.statbank.dk/sitc2r4y

Semi-manufactured and finished goods dominate exports

Since the beginning of the 1960s, the relative importance of agricultural exports has declined. Sales of agricultural products (incl. fish) now account for 17 per cent of total exports. Conversely, over the same period, finished goods have doubled to 39 per cent of total exports, and semi-manufactured goods have increased from around 20 per cent in 1960 to 31 per cent of total exports of goods most recently.

Finished goods account for half of total imports

Since 1960, finished goods have made up an ever larger share of Danish imports, now accounting for half of the total imports. During the same period, imports of semi-manufactured products have declined from one-half to one-third of total imports. Seen over the last 10 years, the share of fuels has increased, finished goods have declined, while the share of respectively semi-manufactured goods and other goods remain almost unchanged.

Denmark is a net exporter of oil

Until the first oil crisis in 1973, imports of crude oil and oil-based products were around 10 per cent of total imports. Then an increase in oil prices pushed the value ratio up to around 20 per cent until the mid-1980s.

Subsequently, the value of imports of crude oil and oil-based products has fallen, so that these goods now account for about 9 per cent of total imports. Oil exports, on the other hand, increased sharply from 1997 to 2004, after which they have dropped substantially.

In 2012, exports of crude oil and oil-based products accounted for almost 10 per cent of total exports. Still, in volume terms, oil exports are now twice as large as oil imports. Denmark has been a net exporter of oil since 1997.

Import and export quantities on the rise

In terms of volume (quantities), Danish imports and exports increased quite steeply until 2007 – the only exception being a slight decline in 2003. In 2008, both import and export volumes dropped slightly, while 2009 was affected by a strong decline of historical scale.

From 2010 both imports and exports volume went up. In 2012 import volumes were up 11 per cent and export volumes were up 5 per cent on the year before.

■ www.statbank.dk/konj42 and bec42

Export prices has increased more than import prices

Since 1995 prices of imported and exported goods have moved largely in parallel – a development illustrated by the unit value indices and the terms of trade. Until 2008 prices of imports as well as exports followed the same increase, and they both decreased steeply in 2009. Since 2009 the export prices have increased more than the import prices.

www.statbank.dk/konj42, bec42 and byt22

The development in the import- and export prices up to 2009 means that Denmark's terms of trade (i.e., the ratio of the export unit value index to the import unit value index) remained fairly constant. Since 2009 the terms of trade have experienced an increase caused by the prices for exports increasing more than the prices for imports.

External trade in services

Trade in services has increased sharply during the last 21 years

During the period 1992 to 2012, external trade in services almost increased five-fold – in 2012 exports amounted to DKK 377.4 billion and imports to DKK 335.0 billion. The prime mover of this increase was primarily accounted for by sea transport, but also other types of transport, provision of goods and consultancy services contributed to this increase.

 \blacksquare www.statbank.dk/bet3 and bop3

In 2009 exports as well as imports declined considerably in connection with the global financial crisis, but trade has now reached the level before the crisis.

Large surplus on the trade in services

Since 1999, there has been an increasing surplus on the trade in services until 2008, when the surplus reached DKK 52.1 billion. The prime mover of this increase was accounted for by sea transport. The global financial crisis caused a sharp reduction in the Danish trade in services, and particularly exports accounted for a sharp fall, which caused a falling surplus on the balance of services amounting to DKK 20.8 billion in 2009. Transport services accounted for the largest fall, where particularly sea transport experienced a considerable fall. After 2009 exports increased more than imports, resulting in large surpluses on the balance of services, which reached DKK 42.4 billion in 2012.

Denmark's largest trading partners

Compared to 2005 the market shares for Denmark's traditional export markets, e.g. Sweden, Germany and UK have declined in 2012, while exports to China, Norway and Switzerland have seen an increase. In the same period USA reduced their import share, whereas China, but also Switzerland, Sweden and Germany have increased their share of Danish imports.

www.statbank.dk/uht3

The United States is Denmark's largest export marked

The United States was Denmark's most important trading partner in both 2005 and 2012 with regard to exports, which was mainly due to purchases of services within sea transport by American customers. The circumstance that the USA widely accounts for sea transport services does not necessarily reflect that the physical sea transport takes place to and from the USA. The essence of the statistics on trade in services is that the Danish shipping companies carry goods on behalf of American customers.

Germany has surpassed the United States and was Denmark's most important trading partner with regard to imports. This is mainly because the United States' share of the Danish imports declined from 14.4 pct. in 2005 to 10.6 pct. in 2012. Sea transport is also important in relation to Germany, but also travel and road transport play a very important role in Danish imports of services from Germany.

Besides the United States, Sweden and Germany are Denmark's most important trading partners with regard to trade in services. For Sweden and Germany sea transport also plays a considerable role, but trade with these two countries also covers a wide range of services, e.g. air and road transport, travels and other business services. It can generally be concluded that if sea transport is disregarded, markets geographically close to Denmark are most important for Denmark's trade in services – which is also precisely the case with regard to trade in goods.

Sea transport covers almost half of Denmark's trade in services

Sea transport is, by far, Denmark's most important trading activity with regard to services. In 2012, this service group accounted for more than 47 pct. of Denmark's exports of services and more than 37 pct. of Denmark's imports of services.

With regard to exports, the group Other business services, is the second-largest service group, which can be attributed to merchanting, but revenue derived from Architectural and engineering services and Research and development services also play a part. Merchanting is also known as triangular trade, where a Danish middleman purchases goods in one country and sells them in another without the goods crossing the Danish border.

www.statbank.dk/uht3

With regard to imports, the group Other business services is also the second-largest service group. The group covers particularly imports of Architectural and engineering services and Research and development services, but also substantial imports of operational leasing, e.g. ships hired without a crew. Travel is the third-largest service group for both imports and exports. Travel covers the expenditure incurred by Danes in connection with especially holidays and business trips abroad, but also trips abroad in connection with health and education are included.

Balance of payments

Surplus on the balance of payments since 1999

For many years, Denmark had a continuous deficit on the balance of payments, which gave rise to increasing foreign debt. However, since 1990 Denmark has – except for 1998 – had a surplus on the balance of payments current account, which contributed to an increase in Denmark's foreign assets. From having a net foreign debt of more than 30 pct. of GDP at the beginning of the 1990s, Denmark had positive net assets abroad of 35 pct. of GDP¹ in 2012.

Denmark's net wealth, or net assets, is affected partly by the surplus on the balance of payments current account and partly by value adjustments. For example changes in the exchange rate will affect the value of the net assets. This gave rise to e.g. foreign debt again from 2006 to 2008, despite surplus on the balance of payments.

Surplus is attributed to trade in goods and services and income

In 2012, the surplus on the balance of payments current account was DKK 95.4 billion and was comprised of a surplus on trade in goods and services of DKK 82.2 billion and a surplus on income (investment income and compensation of employees) of DKK 47.6 billion, while current transfers, consisting of e.g. foreign aid and transfers from and to EU institutions, contributed negatively with DKK 34.4 billion.

Investment income consist of e.g. interest payments and dividends from securities – shares, bonds, and other equity instruments – issued abroad and held by Danish residents, and similar payments from securities issued in Denmark held by non-residents. In case of foreign direct investments reinvested earnings are also included in investment income. The investment income alone contributed with a surplus of DKK 57.7 billion for 2012.
